Group Challenges/ Difficulties

- Delayed Decision-Making: The process of choosing the winners took longer than expected, which caused delays in announcing the results.
- Participant Follow-Up: Ensuring that all participants followed the updated submission guidelines was time-consuming.
- Coordination Issues: Synchronizing tasks among committee members was challenging due to differing schedules and workloads.
- Submission Process Confusion: The initial submission method caused some confusion, leading to last-minute adjustments and additional communication efforts.

- Frequent Updates: Provide participants with regular updates to keep them informed about any changes or delays.

Recommendations

- Clear Submission Guidelines: For future events, finalize the submission method early and communicate it clearly to avoid any confusion.
- Dedicated Review Team: Assign specific members to handle submission reviews and winner selection to streamline the process.
- Backup Plans: Prepare contingency plans for common issues, such as submission delays or participant miscommunication, to reduce last-minute stress.
- Improved Resource Sharing: Utilize tools like shared folders or checklists for easier resource and task tracking.

Conclusion

The "Designing Logo & Jacket Design" event achieved its primary goals of creativity, improving graphic design skills, and adding to the Jarvis Technology Club's branding. The event gave participants the opportunity to demonstrate their talent and explore their potential in a supportive environment. The event resulted in the selection of three best designs. This event not only celebrated creativity but also helped students feel more connected to one another. The efforts of the participants and committee members built a solid basis for future events.

How will this project help you realize your future?

As this is my second co-curriculum event, I have learned to use wise and appropriate words in communication and to manage time properly. Furthermore, I now have a better understanding of how to manage and organize an event according to the schedule. Through this event, I have also learned to work as a team, make decisions, and find solutions to problems. This experience has helped me develop better thinking skills for future events, and I will be able to solve similar problems in upcoming events.
